

What happens if I don't pay the premium?

If you don't pay your DRP/DPP premium,

- you will not be able to complete any driver's licence or vehicle insurance transactions until you pay any debts you owe to ICBC or the government.
- the insurance coverage provided with your driver's licence will not be valid.
- we apply interest to the amount that hasn't been paid.

Can I do anything to reduce or eliminate my premium?

You can eliminate the DRP/DPP premium if you voluntarily surrender your driver's licence to a driver licensing office for the entire billing period (starting the day after your assessment date and ending on your next assessment date — generally your date of birth).*

Your premium may be reduced if you have been prohibited from driving for 60 days or more within the billing period, or you have surrendered your licence for 30 days or more.

If you have voluntarily surrendered your driver's licence, you can have it reissued at any time if you visit a driver licensing office and pay the reduced DRP/DPP premium and a reinstatement and/or renewal fee, as long as you:

- do not have any driving prohibitions
- do not have other debt to ICBC or the government, and
- don't need to be re-examined.

Be sure to call ICBC Insurance Customer Services to find out what the premium and reinstatement fee will be before you visit the driver licensing office.

You may also apply to ICBC Insurance Customer Services for a refund or reduction in your billing if, for a minimum of 30 days in a row during the billing period:

- you were living in another province and lawfully held a driver's licence there.
- you were not in Canada or the United States.
- you were incarcerated.
- you could not operate a vehicle for medical reasons.

* With the DRP program, you may need to surrender your licence once per year for three successive years in order to eliminate premiums.

You will need to provide us with valid documentation to support these circumstances.

Driver Penalty Point Premium and Driver Risk Premium

Drivers with more driving offences or convictions get involved in more crashes than other drivers. Customers tell us that those drivers should pay more for the higher risks and related claims costs they represent on our roads.

Under DPP, you pay if you:

- are guilty of certain driving offences under the Motor Vehicle Act or its regulations, or
- have certain Criminal Code of Canada convictions, like driving while impaired.

The DPP premium is based on your driving offences over a one-year period, and is separate from any fine or other penalty for the offence(s).

You will pay a DRP if you have:

- one or more driving-related Criminal Code convictions, and/or
- one or more 10-point Motor Vehicle Act convictions, and/or
- one or more excessive speeding convictions and/or
- two or more roadside suspensions/prohibitions.

The DRP and DPP premiums are separate from Autoplan insurance premiums. They are billed even if you don't own or insure a vehicle. Any revenue generated will offset Autoplan premiums.

If I have driving convictions that apply to the Driver Penalty Point program and the Driver Risk Premium program, will I get two bills?

No. The Driver Risk Premium and the Driver Penalty Point programs operate in parallel. You will only be billed under one program each year, whichever results in the higher premium.

We will send you the DRP/DPP premium invoice approximately one month before your assessment date, which is generally your date of birth.

When and how are DPP premiums calculated?

The DPP is billed every year. If four or more points have been added to your record since your last DPP assessment, you will be billed according to Table 1.

You will receive a bill approximately one month before your assessment date. The DPP bill applies to driving convictions that you received during the 12-month period ending five months before the assessment date. It may also include your driving convictions during an earlier period which have now been recorded on your driving record. (The date the points are added to your record will be later than the date of the violation, because of the time required for recording and processing.)

Here are some examples of how the number of points for driving offences can result in a DPP premium:

- 3 points for one speeding offence added during your scan period = no DPP premium assessed.
- 3 points for one speeding offence plus 2 points for failing to yield, added during assessment period = 5 points = $230 DPP premium assessed.

Points are only used once to calculate your DPP premiums. For example: if your birthday is June 15, your DPP premium will be calculated in May, based on points accumulated in the 12 months before and including January 15 of that year.

When and how is the DRP calculated?

DRP took effect January 2009 and is billed annually. Each year just prior to your assessment date (which is usually your date of birth) we review your driving record for offences in the previous three years.

Here's an example of how it will work if your birthday is on January 1, 2012.

- your driving history from August 3, 2008 to August 2, 2011 will be reviewed for DRP-related offences
- If your driving record shows
 - one or more driving-related Criminal Code convictions, and/or
 - one or more 10-point Motor Vehicle Act conviction, and/or
 - one or more excessive speeding tickets and/or
 - two or more roadside suspensions/prohibitions
 you may have to pay a DRP based on Table 2.

18	$3,120	34	$10,480	50 or more	$24,000

You will be billed for each category that applies to you. For example, if during the assessment period you have two roadside suspensions, one excessive speeding conviction and one Criminal Code conviction, you would pay $1,595:

- $370 for the roadside suspensions
- $320 for excessive speed
- $905 for the Criminal Code conviction.

Will I have to pay for more than one year?

You will only receive one DRP invoice per year, but DRP looks at all eligible convictions in a three-year period, so a single serious conviction may result in a DRP invoice in each of those three years.
